Men of Lead

A talk by David Joy

A group of lead miners about 1900

An illustrated portrayal of miners rather than mining, looking at one of the most fascinating aspects of Dales life and the way it influenced key mining settlements such as Grassington and Hebden. David Joy looks at how miners gave their all in an age when lead was hard to find, dangerous to extract and yet capable of producing wealth beyond their wildest imagination.

David is a former editor of the Dalesman and author of more than 40 books.
